Diese #vatniksoup bespricht den russischen Stil der Online-Propaganda & Desinformation, den man „Firehose of Falsehood“ nennt (manchal übersetzt als Feuer der Lügen). Es ist eine gängige Strategie für Informationsoperationen, bei der Quantität mehr zählt als Qualität.

1/24

The Firehose of Falsehood: the Russian style of propaganda for an age of information abundance.

- High volume and multi-channel approach
- Shameless in its willingness to broadcast lies
- No commitment to, or requirement for consistency
- Rapid, continuous and repetitive messaging
- Point is not to persuade but to confuse and overwhelm
- Assumes a low trust environment and lowers it further
- Number of arguments matters more than their quality
- Drown out competing messages through sheer volume

„Firehose of Falsehood“ heisst wortwörtlich übersetzt „Feuerweherschlauch der Unwahrheit“. Der Begriff verwendet die Metapher eines Feuerweherschlauchs um die massive Überflutung mit Lügen und irrelevanten Details, die diese Methode so destruktive macht, zu beschreiben.

2/24

Vatniksoup hat diese spezielle Strategie schon in vielen früheren Suppen erwähnt, aber noch nie ausführlicher besprochen. Der Begriff wurde ursprünglich von Paul & Matthews in ihrem 2016 erschienenen Artikel „The Russian Firehose of Falsehood Propaganda Model“ geprägt.

Sie begründeten diesen Namen mit 2 charakteristischen Merkmalen: 1) hohes Volumen, Multi-Kanal-Ansatz; 2) schamlose Bereitschaft zur Verbreitung von Desinformation.

Der Akademiker Giorgio Bertolin beschrieb  Desinformation als unterhaltsam, verwirrend & überwältigend.

Der groß angelegte, Multi-Kanal-Ansatz bedeutet, dass versucht wird, das Narrativ auf allen wichtigen Social-Media-Plattformen zu beeinflussen. Russland führt diese Art von Operationen auf Facebook, Twitter, TikTok, Telegram, VKontakte, YouTube und sogar auf Tinder durch.

Russian 'smash-and-grab' social media operation on Facebook and Instagram attempting to influence Ukraine war - Meta report

Many fake accounts pushing Russian views on the invasion have been blocked, while Meta has also limited the reach of state controlled media. Independent researchers welcome the changes but say disinformation from other sources is left "virtually unchecked".

Der Umfang dieser Operationen darf nicht unterschätzt werden: Bereits 2015 arbeiteten mehr als 1000 bezahlte Trolle bei Jewgeni Prigoschins Internet Research Agency (IRA), der bekanntesten Trollfarm Russlands. Jeder Angestellte hatte eine tägliche Quote von 100 Kommentaren.

Yahoo: Russian trolls watched 'House of Cards' to learn about US politics

A short time later, it began advertising for staff on a headhunting site (hh.ru). One post looking for a copywriter says the job involves "writing diverse texts for the Internet and content for social networks." The posting offered a salary of 30,000 rubles a month (then a little over $500) and said experience was unnecessary. Recruits would work with a team of "young and enthusiastic colleagues" in "a comfortable and stylish office," according to the posting.

That's not how Ludmila Savchuk remembers IRA, where she worked for two months in 2015. She told CNN a card system restricted access to other floors and employees were always under camera surveillance.

"Employees are not really allowed to talk to each other," she said.

Savchuk says she estimates that now "there are about 1,000 people working at Savushkina Street. And this is just one building." She believes other employees work remotely.

Another former employee, interviewed anonymously by the independent Russian TV network RAIN this week, said: "There was a goal - to influence opinions, to lead to a discussion. ... There was a strategy document. It was necessary to know all the main problems of the United States of America. Tax problems, the problem of gays, sexual minorities, weapons."

The former employee said the mission was to "get into the dispute yourself to fire it up, try to rock the boat." He gave an example: "It was necessary to write that sodomy is a sin. This would always get you a couple of dozen likes."

He said IRA made its employees watch the US TV series "House of Cards" to improve their English.

Not unlike the fictional White House of Frank Underwood, Savchuk says, "The atmosphere there reminded me of some anti-utopian Gulag."

Diese Zahlen sind heute sicher um ein Vielfaches höher. Viele weitere Länder nutzen nun Trollfarmen für politische Kampagnen & um Propaganda zu verbreiten.

ABSTRACT

Social media have played a significant role in political discourse across the Mediterranean in recent years. In this research note, we showcase the usefulness of social media data for political analysis by focusing on the main Arabic Twitter hashtag following the assassination of Jamal Khashoggi in Istanbul, October 2018. We collect a sample of almost 2.4 million tweets posted by nearly 370,000 Twitter accounts. We show that just 281 accounts drove 80% of the discourse, and that these accounts can be reliably clustered into separate ideological camps representing different social forces of Egyptian, Turkish, European, and Gulf origin, arrayed against or in support of Saudi Arabia's regional agenda.

KEYWORDS Social media; Polarization; Community Detection; Process Tracing; Mixed Methods

Die Trolle arbeiten in Schichten, und die Arbeit geht tagtäglich rund um die Uhr weiter. Eine bessere Bezeichnung für diese Ausbeutungsbetriebe wäre "Trollfabriken", denn sie haben das Trolling in ein Fließband für Propaganda und Desinformation verwandelt.

Hohes Volumen geht einher mit der Bereitschaft Desinformationen zu verbreiten.  verwendet oft die Strategie „Scheiße an die Wand werfen, um zu sehen, was hängen bleibt“, indem es 100te widersprüchliche & falsche Infos verbreitet, um zu sehen, ob etwas davon ankommt.

Es gibt auch keine Verpflichtung zu irgendeiner Art von Konsistenz und diese Narrative können natürlich auch widersprüchlich sein. Wie bereits erwähnt, ist das Ziel nicht zu überzeugen, sondern zu verwirren und zu überwältigen.

Ein großer Teil der „Argumentation“ der Trolle basiert auf anekdotischen Beweisen oder gefälschten Quellen. Ein gutes Beispiel dafür sind die „ukrainischen Nazis“ Kommentare, die eine Diskussion mit Bildern von Ukrainern mit Nazi-Fahnen oder Nazi-Tattoos überschwemmen.

Diese Strategie funktioniert besonders gut in so genannten Low-Trust-Umgebungen, also in Ländern oder Gesellschaften, wo das Vertrauen in Politiker, Journalisten & Behörden gering ist. Natürlich wird das Vertrauen durch den Einsatz dieser Methoden noch weiter geschwächt.

When it comes to hacking societies, Russia remains the master at sowing discord and disinformation online

China can't hold a candle to GRU's shenanigans, says expert

▲ Shaun Nichols in San Francisco Thu 6 Aug 2020 21:49 UTC

BLACK HAT While China is the bête noire du jour of the US government, Russia is the master of spreading disinformation, fostering conflict, and derailing discourse online, the Black Hat security conference was told today.

At her Thursday keynote, Stanford Internet Observatory's research manager Renee DiResta explained how Russian military intelligence – the GRU – and the private Internet Research Agency (IRA) were putting the likes of China to shame. Security companies and government agencies have good reason to move their focus from Beijing to Moscow, she warned.

The basic methods of hacking public opinion are fairly simple, DiResta explained. Fake accounts generate content and spam it out on social media to amplify the message. If enough real people pick up and the posts go viral the mainstream media kicks in and amplifies the desired message still further.

In Russia's case, it spreads divisive material, stolen information, and fake news in an attempt to turn Americans against each other, sour civil society, sow doubt, and create distractions, leaving people unsure of what's really going on. This worked. In China's case, it tried to make people like China. This didn't work.

Now, a new group of Russian trolls is active on Twitter.

It supports Putin's war in Ukraine, ridicules Kyiv and the West, and attacks independent Russian-language publications, including the BBC Russian Service. Many of these trolls' accounts have been suspended, but dozens are still active.

Darren Linvill, associate professor at the Clemson University Media Forensics Hub in South Carolina, says the network appears to originate from Prigozhin's troll factory.

Mr Linvill and his colleagues have also discovered two similar Russian-language troll networks, but from an opposite camp. One tweets in support of Ukraine, and another promotes Russian opposition, including the jailed Putin critic Alexey Navalny.

While they have all the markings of troll accounts, including random numbers in the Twitter handles and coordinated behaviour, these networks appear to remain undetected by the platform.

The Clemson University team is also tracking pro-Chinese accounts targeting users in both Chinese and English about issues of importance to the Chinese government.

With only a skeleton crew remaining, Twitter does not have resources to swiftly detect, attribute and take down this foreign propaganda, according to former employees.

While the platform also established partnerships with research institutions that detected information operations, scholars say they have not heard anything from Twitter since November.
