Diese #vatniksoup stellt einen amerikanischen Social Media Star vor, Tim Pool (@Timcast). Er ist dafür bekannt, dass er vom Kreml finanziert wird, für sein rechtslastiges Medienimperium, seine Verbindungen zu amerikanischen Verschwörungstheoretikern & für seine coole Mütze.

Tim Pool wurde während der Occupy-Wall-Street-Proteste 2011 bekannt, die er gemeinsam mit dem früheren Immobilienmakler Henry Ferry per Livestream verfolgte. Er war ein Pionier von Livestreams, wo er auch mit dem Publikum interagierte & sich von diesem dirigieren ließ.

TRADITIONAL JOURNALISM

Webcasters promise transparency and objectivity, but not all views deserve equal time.

By Andrew Marantz

December 4, 2017

In 2011, when Tim Pool was twenty-five, he was living with his brother in Virginia, playing guitar and making skateboarding videos. He sometimes called himself anti-authoritarian or “pro-transparency,” but beyond that he didn’t think of himself as very political. After seeing a viral video from Occupy Wall Street, he bought a one-way bus ticket to New York. He had no training as a journalist, but he witnessed things that seemed newsworthy, so he took out his cell phone and started recording. One day, as the police tried to evict the protesters by force, he filmed for twenty-one hours straight. In case his phone got confiscated, he broadcast his footage online, in real time. He stuck a piece of masking tape to his phone and wrote on it with a Sharpie: “Live Stream.”

Tim Pool And Henry Ferry: The Men Behind Occupy Wall Street's Live Stream

The best ground view of Occupy Wall Street comes from a former skateboard videographer and a one-time Realtor, aka Tim Pool and Henry Ferry of The Other 99. With little more than mobile phones they've offered a perspective that the mainstream media can't match. Here's how.

Pools Aufnahmen wurden auf NBC und anderen großen Sendern ausgestrahlt, und Time bezeichnete ihn als „die Augen der Bewegung“. 2011 bezeichnete sich Pool als „100%iger Aktivist“ und erklärte, er betrachte sich nicht als Journalist. Ein Jahr später hatte sich das geändert...

So, would you call yourself a journalist?

I don't consider myself a journalist. I mean, people can say I am whatever I am, if that's what I am. I consider myself an activist 100%. And I feel like the best thing for the movement is to have an independent media outlet that's trying not to be biased. The truth will set you free—that's the famous quote.

...und Pool sagte gegenüber El Pais aus, er sei kein Aktivist, sondern ein Journalist. 2018 sagte er, dass „ich mich nicht mit Occupy Wall Street verbünde und es auch nie getan habe“, und später 2021 bezeichnete er die Occupy-Bewegung als „korrupt“.

Some people call what he does "citizen journalism." He would rather call it "independent journalism." "I'm not an activist," he points out. "If anything, I am an information activist."

Nachdem sich die Occupy-Bewegung verlaufen hatte, wechselte Pool zu VICE Media. Dort begann er mit der Berichterstattung über regierungsfeindliche Proteste in Istanbul & wurde sogar mit einem Short Award in der Kategorie „Bester Journalist in sozialen Medien“ ausgezeichnet.

Tim Pool Live Streaming from Istanbul

By Tim Pool June 13, 2013, 8:00pm

Share:

Journalist Tim Pool is streaming live from Istanbul, where antigovernment protests have been ongoing since Friday, May 31. What began as a campaign against the city's plans to construct a mall in a public park has escalated into a massive display of anger over the ruling party's neo-Islamist social agenda and religiously driven laws. Riot police have moved in with brutal force, using tear gas on tens of thousands of protestors. It is the largest civil uprising in the history of Turkey.

Update, June 15: Police raided Gezi Park and reclaimed it using water canons, riot gear, tear gas, and rubber bullets. The police have reportedly gone after fleeing protesters in nearby streets and hotels, and municipal workers are cleaning up the park and square.

Update, June 14: A tentative agreement has been struck between the government and protesters in Turkey. Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's administration has said they will postpone their plans to demolish Gezi Park until appeals are brought before a court. The protesters occupying the park have been told to evacuate, and are planning to meet Friday evening to decide whether or not they will comply.

VIDEOS BY VICE

Update, June 13: Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan finally met with a delegation representing protesters in Gezi Park, but also issued warnings that implied that he was ready to evict the occupiers by force if necessary. It's unclear what is going to happen next, but tensions between the police and the protesters continue to mount.

2013– 2014 ging Pool in die Ukraine, um über den Euromaidan und die Revolution der Würde zu berichten, die schließlich zum Sturz der korrupten Janukowitsch-Regierung führte. Seinen Äußerungen aus dieser Zeit nach zu urteilen, schien er relativ pro-ukrainisch zu sein.

Live Streaming the Ukrainian Revolt

By Tim Pool December 15, 2013, 7:00am

Share: X f <

For weeks hundreds of thousands of Ukrainians have taken to the streets to protest president Viktor Yanukovich's refusal to sign a deal that would have brought the country closer to full EU membership. Demonstrations became violent two weekends ago when security forces cracked down on anti-government protesters who had taken control of entire sections of the city, including Independence Square, the heart of the country's 2004 Orange Revolution, as well as the main City Hall building. VICE's Tim Pool is on the ground in Kiev livestreaming the increasingly violent revolt.

If the livestream is temporarily offline, it's because our team are making their way to a new position in Kiev. Chances are we will be live again soon. Please check back shortly.

Finally, as our guest, what are your wishes for Ukrainians?

“My message for everyone in the world is to share the information, to tell stories in any way you can, either it is calling your friends and telling, here is what happened. If you have Twitter or Facebook, post information about what you see and what is happening.

“In terms of politics in Ukraine, I would not speak, Ukrainian people know better than I do. They are going to do what they think is best, and I am just here to observe and understand. And when Ukrainians make a decision, I am just going to ask them, why, and then say okay, thank you.

2014 interviewte Pool den finnisch-deutschen Verschwörungstheoretiker Kim Dotcom. Kim ist dafür bekannt, dass er sich gegen die USA/NATO & die ukrainische Souveränität ausspricht; weniger dafür, dass er Vatnik Suppen gedroht hat zu klagen, wenn wir ihn deswegen bloßstellen.

I suggest that you get some legal advice. This case will keep you busy and it won't be cheap. Not to mention the damage you have done to your reputation. People who will Google your name will see this case in the top results and I will tweet about the case every step of the way. I herewith give you the opportunity to avoid all of that. Delete your entire bullying blog, delete your bullying tweet against me and write a sincere apology tweet. If you do that I won't litigate. I give you 24 hours to make a decision. After that I will wire the retainer to the law firm and they will deal with it. Be wise.

“Influential accounts on the political right rarely engaged in factchecking behavior, and were responsible for the most widely spread incidents of false or misleading information in our dataset,” the report said.

Out of the 21 top offenders, 15 were verified Twitter accounts - which are particularly dangerous when it comes to election misinformation, the study said. The “repeat spreaders” responsible for the most widely spread misinformation included Eric Trump, Donald Trump, Donald Trump Jr and influencers like James O’Keefe, Tim Pool, Elijah Riot and Sidney Powell. All 21 of the top accounts for misinformation leaned rightwing, the study showed.

Jan 2024 beklagt sich Tim Pool „Mann aus dem Volk“ dass die von ihm benutzten Privatjets, die früher „nur ein bisschen mehr als die 1. Klasse“ kosteten, jetzt zu teuer sind. Für das „Ende der Industrie“ machte er Diversität, Klimawandel & den „Großen Reset“ verantwortlich.

Amid opposition from the skaters, Pool dropped his plans to offer the prize. But a few months later in November 2023, he quietly bought the skate park's land, purchasing the slab and a nearby building through a limited liability company for $850,000.

"They don't own the spot," Pool later said on his show in July 2024, explaining the purchase. "By what right do they have to tell me I can't stand on a derelict piece of property where they're squatting?"

Pool has floated using the land to build a much larger skate park, but he made few immediate changes to the property, and he hasn't banned anyone from skating there. Because nothing but the ownership had changed, skaters realized only belatedly that he had bought the land.
