In today's #vatniksoup, I'll introduce a Canadian social media personality and QA tester, Patrick JM (@vonClownsewitz). He's best-known for spreading pro-Kremlin propaganda & for creating a fake persona as an academic expert on international relations and strategic studies.

1/19

This investigation was put together by The Unintelligence Agency.

Patrick is a self-proclaimed expert on international relations, regularly pissing on people who comment on geopolitical issues but who have no background on the topic.

@vonClownsewitz

I did strategic studies at university. No military experience, though a lot of my colleagues and profs did, so lots of info from them over the years, along with copious amounts of research -- since that's the subject of study for the most part.

My profession is <redacted>.

I hate this shit honestly. I mix it up with a lot of fellow academics and experts on here, we disagree on a lot, and we argue a lot, but we respect each other's expertise.

Credentialism is dumb. It's a weak argument to begin with and not a substitute for taking apart one's methodology or providing a competing interpretation or hypothesis.

But yeah, if dude wants to be ThatGuy(TM) at a bare minimum make damned fucking sure you have the better credentials.

According to the man himself, he's a "published strategic analyst" who does "defense research" and who is also "speaking at panels." He also claims to be one of his institutions Russia experts, which is of course yet another lie.

Let's start with the obvious: Paddy is not an expert on anything, and his credentials are completely made up. In reality, he double-majored in studio arts and on political science, probably having a Bachelor's level degree in both.

By the way, the picture in the first tweet is his campaign poster for running to become a student representative at his university. Including the Soviet flag and the cat ears in the photo was a brave move, but unfortunately he lost the election.

At the time, he was 35.

Paddy's name is mentioned in exactly one technical paper that's basically a pamphlet, but not as an author but as a contributor to the technical analysis.

In reality, Paddy works as a video game tester at a local company that pays him around 2CAD/hour over the minimum wage.

BRIEFING NOTES

With Contributions in Technical Analysis by Patrick

VIDEO GAME TESTERS – FQA

What makes a great tester?

- A great tester is dedicated to their work and wants to help make amazing games even better.
- A great tester works as an integral part of a team hand in hand with their team leader and colleagues.

DDG also promoted Paddy's hilariously bad analysis on Prigozhin's mutiny in Jun 2023. He's also spread false narratives on Holodomor, a Soviet policy that resulted in millions of dead Ukrainians in 1932–33 due to starvation.

Nice move & correct. My dumber impulse is to look at the actual toll of those who starved in the famine or were killed in the purges -- not only in territorial Ukraine -- and address the mythology of "Holodomor" as a "Russian" Holocaust (but bigger!) against "Ukraine" as such.

It's a matter of time, place, and audience.

Sure, we can get into drought and famine being cyclical and seasonal in the nascent Soviet Union and the Imperiya before it.

We can ponder the impact of resisting collectivization by widespread destruction of agricultural equipment, and crops, and the slaughter of livestock and crops, and the slaughter of livestock in the hundreds of thousands (better to destroy it than let it be collectivized)... In the middle of a famine

We can even observe the impact on Tatar and Russian populations in the Volga region, and of course, the Kazakhs.

Or even infer the long term effect of collectivization re: the frequency and severity of famine and drought in the decades that followed.

But do you think Cernovich's comments is the place for that discussion?

An interesting take from Von Clownsewitz on Twitter. He was also our guest on the podcast a few times. What do you think?

"As I've been saying since yesterday, a lot of insight can be gleamed from looking at this through the lens of the 2016 Turkish "coup attempt".

- The disloyal have revealed themselves.
- Perfect excuse to replace Shoigu and Gerasimov with hardliners without it looking like an escalation (common interpretation now is that this makes Moscow look weak)
- Wagner is now consolidated under MOD control (contracts signed, Prigo has previously refused).
- Russia is now more, not less united.
- Prigo is likely exiled but gets a way out without being unalived.
- Further consolidation of power

- Prigo is likely exiled but gets a way out without being unalived.
- Further consolidation of power.
- Smokescreen for redeploying Wagner and the Kadyrovites.

Bonus: western intel/propaganda exposed hard.

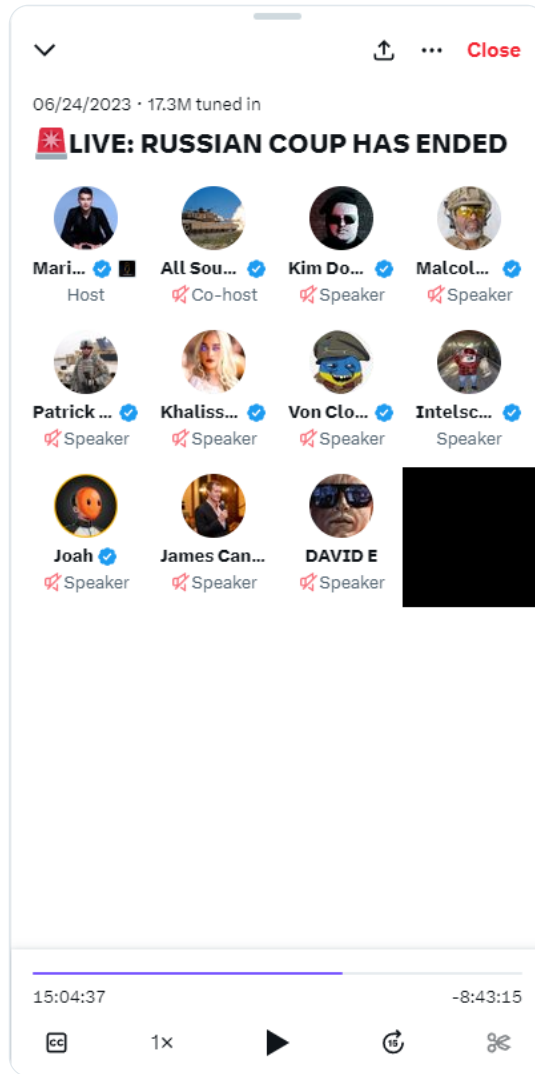

Probably something I'm not thinking of and a trap of some sort that wasn't baited, like UAF "taking advantage of the chaos" and exposing themselves, but the Americans wisely advised to hang back and wait (though more likely because they felt that advancing might deter the march on Moscow).

The usual caveat: this is just speculation, and it's hard to speculate motives after the fact, because we risk inferring that likely results were all intended, which I'm sure I'm doing here, but at least I'm aware of it."

Return of Von Clownsewitz

First we say a short goodbye to the late peace activist George Martin, then we spend the rest of the hour with strategic analyst. IR academic, friend of the show, and social media superstar Von Clownsewitz, talking about the war in Ukraine. Always good with Von C!

Paddy seems to be a big fan of communism and the USSR, often posing with the hammer and sickle flag in the background. I mean, the man even bought a brand new flag for Russia's Victory Day in 2020.

When discussing Ukraine, Patrick's all about them Nazis. Below you can see the man himself wearing a Marilyn Manson shirt depicting the Nazi eagle. As you can see, he's also wearing a red fedora with some leopard stripes - pretty cool, eh?

Evan Rachel Wood claims Marilyn Manson hurled anti-Semitic abuse at her, has three Nazi tattoos and drew swastikas on her bedside table - as she denies they were just having 'kinky sex'

- Hollywood actor Wood, 33, shared more details of the alleged abuse she suffered at the hands of the rock star on her Instagram Story Friday
- She claimed Manson, real name Brian Hugh Warner, called her 'a Jew' in a 'derogatory manner'
- He told her it was 'better' that her mother had converted to Judaism and did not have Jewish descent because it meant Wood wasn't 'blood Jewish'
- He would also often use the 'N-word', she said
- The 33-year-old also shared photos of two tattoos on Manson's arms and another on his chest which she said are Nazi symbols
- Wood denied they were just having 'kinky sex' when he 'tortured' her saying they 'never had a 'BDSM' relationship' and that she 'thought [she] was going to die'
- Westworld star Wood was among the first to publicly accuse Manson of abuse in an Instagram post Monday
- She claimed he starting 'grooming me when I was a teenager and horrifically abused me for years'
- Since then, at least 11 women have come forward accusing the rocker of physical and sexual abuse dating back many years
- Manson denied all the allegations as 'distortions of reality' Monday

Now here's some kitchen sink psychology: Paddy's someone who's attempting to connect with a particular part of his identity and family history, and doing it in the most cringe, 13-year-old edgelord way possible, despite having been in his 30s and now his 40s.

I would like to close this soup with the tweet below and beg to differ with Paddy here: I'd argue that even funnier than a racecar driver turning geopol expert is the game tester making barely minimum wage at 41, promoting himself as a geopolitical expert.
