Nella #vatniksoup di oggi, parleremo di MICE. Non si tratta di topi, ma di un acronimo che deriva dalla strategia di reclutamento della CIA utilizzata nello spionaggio. È l'acronimo di Money (Soldi), Ideology (Ideologia), Compromise (Compromissione) ed Ego (Ego).

1/30

MICE spiega le principali motivazioni dietro le azioni di spionaggio, sia segrete che palesi. Mentre lo storico del personale della CIA Randy Burkett ha dichiarato che MICE ha "superato la sua utilità" nel controspionaggio, sembra che si applichi ancora abbastanza bene a...

An Alternative Framework for Agent Recruitment: From MICE to RASCLS

Randy Burkett

Today's [agent] recruiters must learn and use the significant breakthroughs in understanding of human motivations and the means for influencing them that have occurred since the early 1980s.

Ask any CIA National Clandestine Service officer what his or her mission is and the likely reply will be “to recruit spies to steal secrets and conduct covert action.” This mission has been relatively unchanged since the founding of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) on 13 June 1942. What has changed is the profile of the people we ask to become agents to steal the secrets and engage in covert action. In this article I will discuss how we trained OSS and CIA officers to find and recruit the people who became our agents.

The story starts with World War II, when OSS officers were largely focused on appealing to the patriotism of people to resist foreign occupiers. There was no overall strategy for finding the right agents other than linking up with local activists and appealing to their national pride. The paper then moves to the Cold War when the focus for recruitment shifted to state actors who had the placement and access to betray the secrets of the communist governments in power. During the Cold War period and today, agents who agreed to spy are said to do so for reasons that imply weakness or vulnerability: money, ideology, blackmail, or ego. These factors are captured in the mnemonic MICE. It is a framework that I believe has outlived its usefulness. Today's recruiters of agents abroad often pursue non-state actors with complex mixtures of competing loyalties, including family, tribe, religion, ethnicity, and nationalism.

I argue that today's recruiters must learn and use the significant breakthroughs in understanding of human motivations and the means for influencing people that have occurred since the early 1980s. In particular, I will discuss the work of Dr. Robert Cialdini and how his six influence factors, reciprocity, authority, scarcity, commitment (and consistency), liking, and social proof—RASCLS—could be applied to motivate potential agents to agree to spy and to improve the productivity of existing agents.

However, before I look at how we have trained officers to recruit in the past and how we should recruit in the future, I think we should first examine what we are asking people to do when they become spies.

Is Spying Rational in the Face of the Risks?

On the surface, committing espionage appears to be less than rational. Agents risk death, either at the hands of an enemy or by their own legal systems. Even some countries that do not impose the death penalty

...coloro che vengono reclutati per diffondere la propaganda online.

Quando si fanno ricerche e approfondimenti su individui che producono e promuovono punti di vista favorevoli al Cremlino, si possono rapidamente trovare collegamenti tra le persone e queste 4 motivazioni.

Naturalmente, queste motivazioni possono anche sovrapporsi. Un esempio di controspionaggio è il caso di Earl Edwin Pitts, che era stato un agente dell'FBI che aveva venduto segreti prima ai sovietici, e poi ai russi. Durante il suo interrogatorio ha raccontato che...

4/30

...era stato trattato malamente durante il suo lavoro per l'FBI, ma era anche motivato dalle vagonate di rubli offerti dai russi.

Oggi giorno le persone che lavorano per favorire un agente straniero sono chiamati "utili idioti", un termine falsamente attribuito a Lenin.

5/30

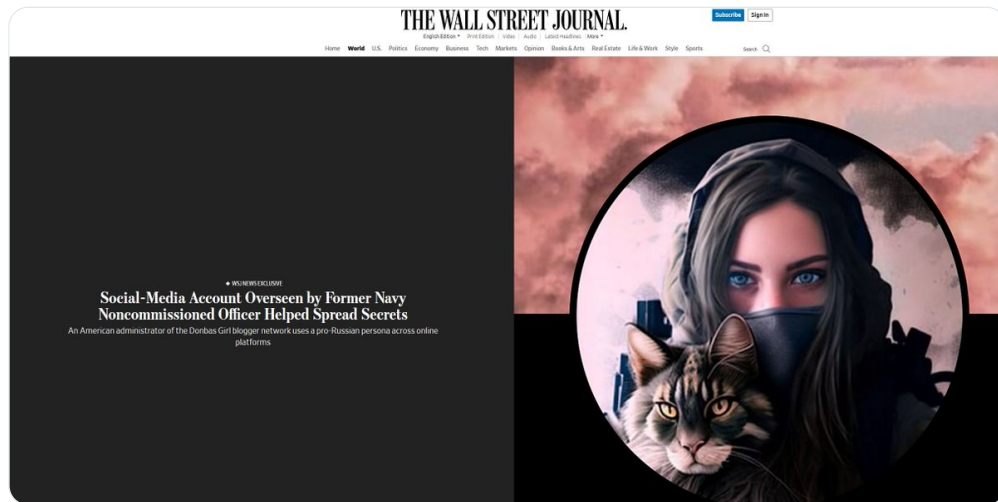

Secondo me è controproducente riferirsi a queste persone come idioti, in quanto alcuni di loro sono piuttosto intelligenti, semplicemente hanno colto l'opportunità di guadagnare "lavorando per il nemico".

6/30

Un progetto di ricerca chiamato Project Slammer, condotto alla fine degli anni 80, suggerisce che i soggetti che diventano spie spesso si vedono come speciali, persino unici; se lo meritano, vivono in una situazione insoddisfacente, hanno esaurito altre opzioni se non quella...

...diffondere disinformazione e false narrazioni non faccia male a nessuno, che sia solo "un'altra versione" della storia. Eppure queste azioni hanno delle conseguenze: per esempio possono influenzare il sostegno e gli aiuti che l'Ucraina riceve dall'Occidente.

A video that's gone viral on social media platforms like Twitter and Telegram supposedly shows a pile of cocaine on the desk of Ukraine President Volodymyr Zelensky. But the video has been altered and the original video, which is available on Instagram, proves the cocaine isn't real.

Ora passerò al territorio della speculazione. Ho fatto ricerche su "giornalisti indipendenti", politici ed altri attori filo-russi per un po' di tempo e mi sembra di avere un'idea di cosa spinga alcuni di loro.

Ecco la mia analisi per ogni motivazione:

I soldi: Questa è la più semplice: la maggior parte dei portavoce del Cremlino sono motivati dai soldi. Infatti se si togliessero dall'equazione, smetterebbero di produrre le loro sciocchezze e passerebbero ad altro.

Bulgarian secret services: Russia pays public figures to spread propaganda

The Bulgarian secret services have data showing that Russia pays about €2000 (BGN 4,000) per month to public figures, journalists, and politicians to spread its propaganda in the country, a government spokesperson and head of the prime minister's office, Lena Borislavova told Darik radio over the weekend.

The government lost a no-confidence vote but will stay in power until a new one is formed or, if that is impossible until the president dissolves parliament.

Borislavova explained that the money was given to Bulgarian politicians, famous journalists, analysts, political scientists and other persons appearing in the public media. The Russian state paid them to shape public opinion.

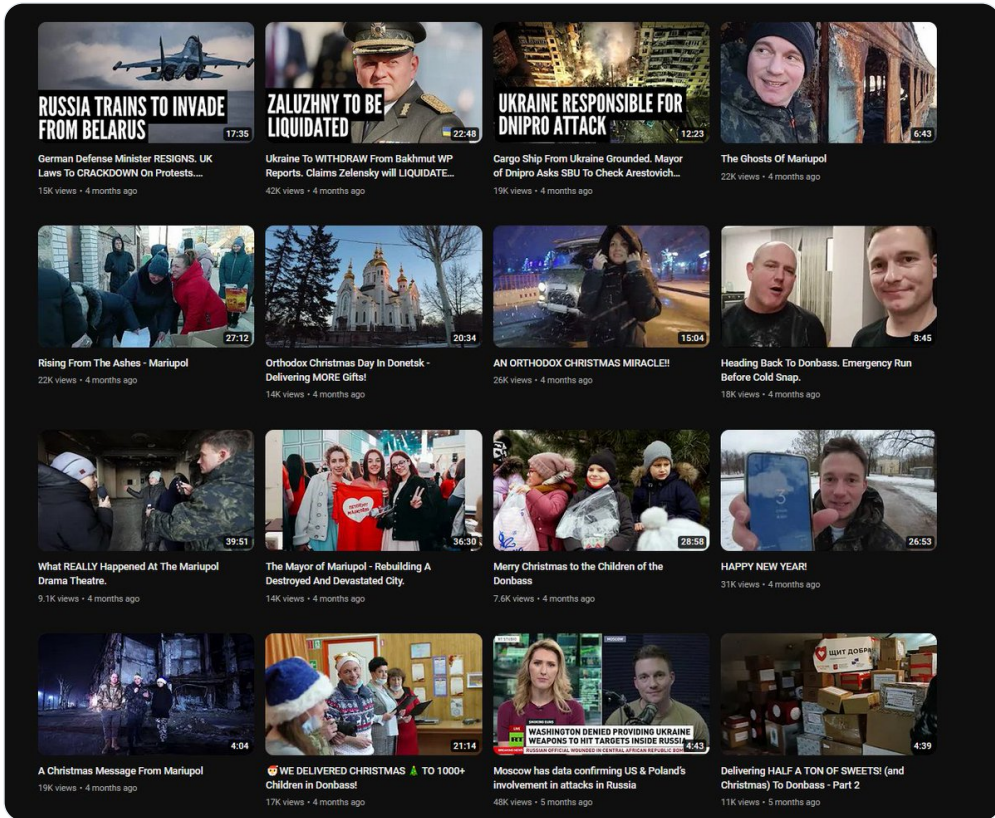

"To all of you who spit on the EU and NATO for free, as well as support Putin's actions in Ukraine, you should know. You are screwed up. Those who inspire you to do so are paid. Monthly," she added.

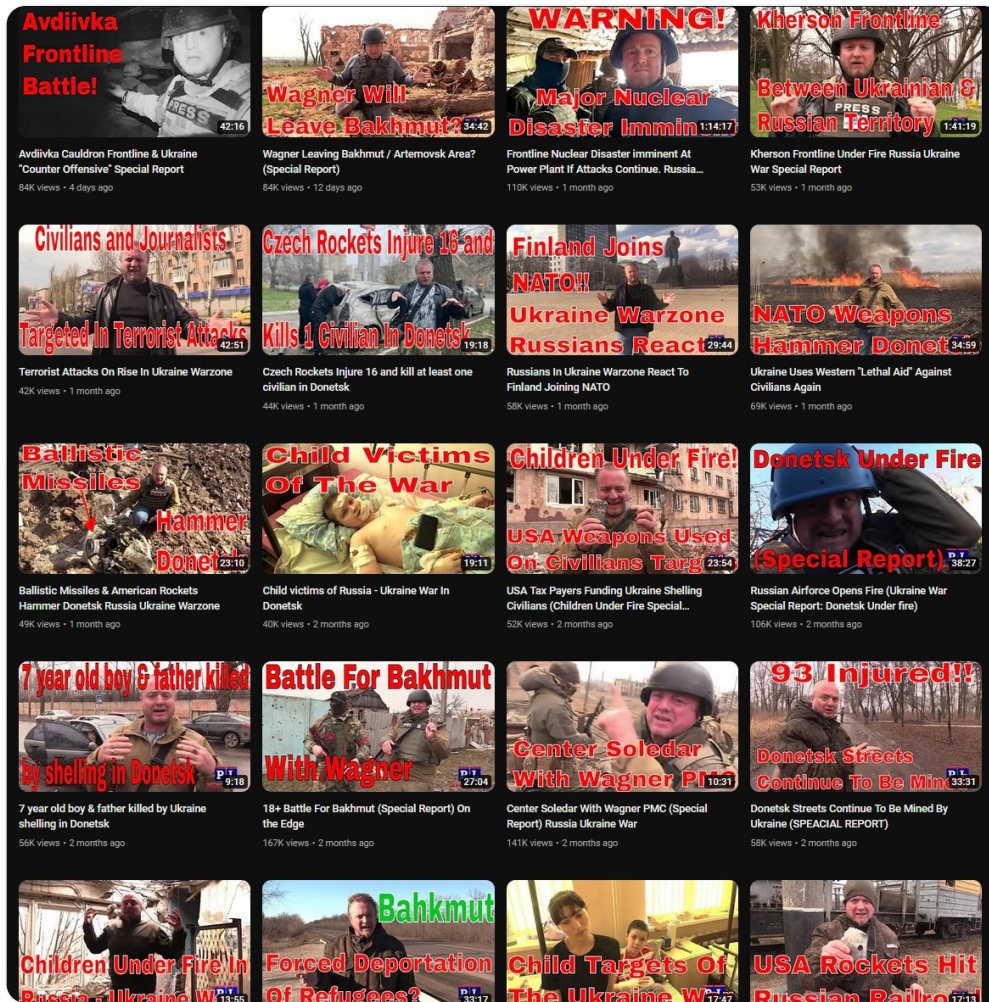

According to her, some public speakers are used to confusing the public and playing with misconceptions and fears. She said foreign interests "disguised as national interest" are a red line for her party, "Change Continues."

A mio parere, la maggior parte dei "giornalisti indipendenti", tra cui Janus Putkonen, Mike "iEarlGrey" Jones e Patrick Lancaster, sono spinti dal denaro. Tutti loro hanno avuto qualche difficoltà nella loro vita precedente e sono passati a lavorare per il Cremlino per...

Ad alcuni imprenditori sono stati offerti dal Cremlino affari profittevoli, forse per aiutare la loro causa.

Inoltre, ci sono politici e truffatori che molto probabilmente sono guidati sia dal loro ego che dai soldi.

14/30

Tra questi ci sono Gonzalo Lira, Jackson "Z" Hinkle e la maggior parte del gruppo MAGA. Politici come Marjorie Taylor Greene e Boebert abbandonerebbero qualsiasi ideologia (ad esempio, QAnon) non appena non sia più utile ai loro interessi personali.

THE HORSESHOE THEORY

In political science, the horseshoe theory asserts that the far-left and the far-right are not opposites at the end of a political continuum, but rather, that they closely resemble each other, nearly meeting like the ends of a horseshoe, as in the illustration below:

Putin usa questa strategia a suo vantaggio da sempre.

A mio avviso, molti di quelli che hanno visitato la Russia e partecipato a feste in varie occasioni sono i bersagli più evidenti di Kompromat.

Ukraine: 400,000 Casualties, Millions Displaced & Low Birth Rate: Ex-Trump Adviser Blames US For 'Killing A Nation'

EUROPE EXPERT REVIEWS By Parth Satam | February 23, 2023

A US-based military and strategic affairs analyst has questioned President Joe Biden's move to send main battle tanks (MBT) to Ukraine and raised the alarm over the possible transfer of fighter jets.

Slamming these measures as escalatory that are aimed to provoke Russia rather than promote ways to end the conflict, former US Army officer Colonel Douglas Macgregor also warns Ukraine losing its population if more citizens are made to fight in the war.

Macgregor, a former adviser in the then-President Donald Trump administration, said the military aid to Ukraine is a "scam" and a "money laundering scheme," which will not be accounted for once Russia wins and Ukraine is left more dysfunctional.

In a clip of an interview with a TV channel, Macgregor says towards the end that the US should announce a ceasefire and call for unconditional talks with Russia, which he mentions had always been open to dialogue.

The interviewer also sarcastically asks if the US would be willing to send advanced fighters like the F-35 since it had already abandoned its previous position of not sending tanks earlier in the war.

4,00,000 Casualties & A Falling Population

Macgregor also quotes staggering figures of Ukraine's military casualties against their current population status and other development indicators, which indicates the country is headed for depopulation if it continues to fight Russia.

In the context of Western tanks being approved for Ukraine, Macgregor says that, for one, Ukrainian "military power is disintegrating" and is on its "last legs," while the tanks themselves will not be available for a few

The U.S. Navy's Diving and Salvage Center can be found in a location as obscure as its name—down what was once a country lane in rural Panama City, a now-booming resort city in the southwestern panhandle of Florida, 70 miles south of the Alabama border. The center's complex is as nondescript as its location—a drab concrete post-World War II structure that has the look of a vocational high school on the west side of Chicago. A coin-operated laundromat and a dance school are across what is now a four-lane road.

The center has been training highly skilled deep-water divers for decades who, once assigned to American military units worldwide, are capable of technical diving to do the good—using C4 explosives to clear harbors and beaches of debris and unexploded ordnance—as well as the bad, like blowing up foreign oil rigs, fouling intake valves for
