Diese #vatniksoup spricht über die aktuelle Situation des Informationskrieges Russlands & seiner Verbündeten gegen den Westen. Die westlichen Maßnahmen zur Desinformationsbekämpfung sind stark unterfinanziert, wodurch es schwierig ist,  Einflussnahme wirksam zu bekämpfen.

Europa macht heute in der Informationskriegsführung denselben Fehler, den es in der konventionellen Kriegsführung gemacht hat: Wir setzen nicht genügend Ressourcen ein. Europa war nicht darauf vorbereitet, die Ukraine voll zu unterstützen & Krieg gegen Russland zu führen.

Genauso haben wir die Informationskriegsführung vernachlässigt. Berichten zufolge wird Russland im nächsten Jahr rund 3 Milliarden EUR für seine Informationsoperationen im In- und Ausland ausgeben. Verbündete wie die KPCh, der Iran & Nordkorea werden wohl nachziehen.

Russian Disinformation Targets the European Union

Executive Summary:

- Russia continues to conduct misinformation campaigns against Europe. As its war in Ukraine continues and Europeans become tired of the prolonged conflict, fewer people will be engaged and thus more susceptible to disinformation coming from Russia.
- Russia's current disinformation campaign revolves around three key ideas: the spread of anti-Ukrainian agendas, anti-EU themes and narratives, and the glorification of Russia, its military-political leadership, diplomacy, and economic "achievements."
- Ordinary people already see the problems within

European society that the European Union needs to solve, and it will only take a slight push from Russia to spur discontent among vulnerable populations against their governments' shortcomings.

...desto weniger gibt es aus - ein sehr beunruhigender Trend. Russland betreibt zB in Italien nach wie vor große Propaganda- & Soft-Power-Operationen. Die spanische Vox-Partei wurde zum Teil von einer Bank finanziert, die Viktor Orban, einem Verbündeten des Kremls, gehört.

For years, Italy has been an important partner of Russia in the EU and remains so even now, staying one of the most liberal countries towards Russia. As of February 2022, about 500 Italian companies were permanently in Russia, 70 of which had manufacturing facilities, 68 banks, and several law firms. A hundred of the top Italian companies in Russia provided jobs for 34,000 people in Russia, generated $7.3 billion in annual revenue, and had $6.8 billion in capital and $7.6 billion in assets, KSE Institute reports. The most "dependent" on Russia, with a revenue share of more than 10%, have been Italian companies operating in three industries: Engineering, Food & Beverages, and Construction & Architecture.

‘Doppelgänger’: the pattern of Russia’s anti-Western influence operation

Katarzyna Chawryło

On 4 September, while explaining its latest sanctions against Russia over that country’s attempts to disrupt the upcoming US presidential election, the US Department of Justice exposed the organisational patterns behind Russian influence operations in the West. The actions it uncovered had been ongoing since 2022, targeting the United States and its allies, including European countries such as France, Germany, and Poland, as previously reported by local organisations tracking Russian information threats and by European institutions. Due to the methods used, the operation has been dubbed ‘Doppelgänger’.

According to the materials collected by investigators, Russia has operated in the information sphere in a comprehensive manner: the Kremlin has coordinated and financed activities involving a variety of tools and actors – Russian or Russian-linked – with strictly defined objectives, rules of procedure, and performance evaluation. These efforts have primarily sought to undermine support for Ukraine, promote Russia-friendly policies, and stoke internal tensions within Western countries.

Leaked internal documents from a Kremlin-controlled propaganda center reveal how a well-coordinated Russian campaign supported far-right parties in the European Parliament elections — and planted disinformation across social media platforms to undermine Ukraine.

Was der EU fehlt, ist Zusammenarbeit zwischen Ländern & Organisationen sowie eine ausreichend starke Reaktion gegenüber den Nationen, die diese Operationen orchestrieren.

Die EU reagiert mit gesetzlicher Regulierung, aber die ist zu langsam für schnelle Online-Operationen. Um sie wirksam zu bekämpfen, muss der Westen schnelle Reaktionsstrategien entwickeln. Eine Möglichkeit ist die Nutzung von Bewegungen wie der NAFO in den sozialen Medien.

Die alarmierende Schlussfolgerung ist, dass die EU ständig einen Schritt hinterherhinkt und sich schwer tut zu erkennen, dass der Informationskrieg gegen Russland und seine Verbündeten ein andauernder Konflikt ist; einen den wir ihn im Moment klar verlieren.

There are fears in Ukraine that Russia is planning an invasion

Russia is plotting to stage acts of provocation to create a pretext to invade Ukraine, a US official has said.

Wir müssen das gleiche Maß an Scharfsinn auf Russlands Propagandisten & ihre Online-Operationen anwenden. Dies würde ihre Wirksamkeit gegen westliche Demokratien erheblich verringern. Anstatt immer nur im Nachhinein zu reagieren, müssen wir präventiv agieren.
