In today's #vatniksoup, I'll introduce a Russo-Italian politician, Irina Osipova. She's best-known for her ties to European and Russian neo-Nazi groups like Golden Dawn and Rusich, for her close ties to various Russian officials, and for her new job at the Italian senate.

1/17

She was born in Moscow, Russia in 1987 and his father is Oleg Osipov, former director of the Russian Center of Science and Culture in Rome. The organization is basically a form of Russian soft power & aims to establish contacts between the influential Russians and Italians.

2/17

Today, the organization is led by Dariya Pushkova, former RT propagandist and daughter of prominent Russian politician Aleksey Pushkov who also happens to be the President of the "Commission on Information Policy".

Biography

Russian Senator and Chairman of Federation Council's Commission on Information Policy and Cooperation with the Media.

Born 10 August 1954 in Moscow.

Higher Education: graduated in 1976 from the Moscow State Institute of International Relations with a specialization in International Relations.

Speaks two foreign languages: English, French.

Candidate of Historical Sciences.

1983–1988 – Editor-Consultant to Problems of Peace and Socialism/World Marxist Review (Prague).

1988–1991 – Consultant of the International Department of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

1991–1995 – Deputy Editor-in-Chief of the newspaper Moskovskiy Novosti (Moscow News)

1995–1998 – Deputy General Director, Public Russian Television (ORT)

From 1998 – Head, Author, and Anchor of Postscriptum (TV Centre).

Osipova got involved in politics at an early age, and already back in 2012, she founded an association called "RIM - Young Italian-Russian", which aimed to bring together all "active and creative young people, who mainly use Russian in their daily lives".

She also participated in the Rome municipal elections from Giorgia Meloni's Brothers of Italy party in 2016, getting just under 200 votes. Her campaign relied heavily on Putinisms like "The model for Italy to defend national interests" and she referred to Putin as the...

...Tsar and as "a leader who has no equal in the world." You can still find some of these messages on her old X/Twitter account.

After she wasn't elected, she started touring the Europe, visiting various far-right figures while building new connections.

6/17

Already back in 2014 she was demonstrating against the European sanctions on Russia after they illegally annexed Crimea. These demonstrations also focused on supporting Russia's policy against the Kyiv's "Nazi regime" and their stance on Donbas and Crimea.

In 2017, she participated as one of the speakers/panelists at an event called "Donbass, a war on the conscience of Europe". Apparently the whole event focused on EU's lack of solidarity towards the fake republics of DPR and LPR.

DONBASS, UNA GUERRA
SULLA COSCIENZA DELL'EUROPA

L'Unione Europea ha approvato a partire dallo scorso mese di giugno l'abolizione dei visti obbligatori per l'Ucraina, come primo passo verso l'integrazione come Stato membro. Ma l'Europa sembra voler ignorare il cruento conflitto che dal 2014 insanguina il Donbass, scatenato dopo il golpe di piazza Maidan dal governo ucraino contro la popolazione delle regioni di Donetsk e di Lugansk, che hanno proclamato Repubbliche popolari indipendenti in difesa della propria identità russa.

L'Italia è direttamente coinvolta in questa guerra quasi sconosciuta all'opinione pubblica, dovendo subire le sanzioni economiche alla Russia imposte dagli USA e dall'UE, che in questi anni hanno penalizzato l'export italiano per miliardi di euro.

Approfondiamo i retroscena di questa guerra quasi ignorata dai maggiori media europei, nonostante continui a muovere vittime quotidianamente, insieme a chi ha potuto osservare la situazione del conflitto in Donbass con i propri occhi, per iniziative diplomatiche, culturali e umanitarie.

Criticizing the Kyiv "Nazi regime" hasn't stopped Irina from hanging out with literal neo-Nazis in Europe and in Russia. He's spent time with Andrea Palmeri, former football hooligan, who was sentenced to 5 years in prison for recruiting people to fight in Donbas.

Other groups Irina has associated herself with include a far-right, fascist movement Lealtà Azione, and a Greek, far-right and neo-Nazi and ultranational criminal organization, Golden Dawn.

In 2020, GD's leaders were convicted for heading a criminal organisation.

Many anti-EU "experts" often refer to the decisions made on the EU level by people who were not elected (supposedly they haven't heard of the EU parliament).

Here we have a clear case of pro-Kremlin Russian who has strong ties to both Russian and ...

Understanding Russia's Soft Power Strategy

This article examines the specifics of Moscow's soft power strategy. The sources of the Kremlin's interest in the soft power concept are explained. The article discusses how the soft power concept fits in the current Russian foreign policy philosophy. Russia's soft power resources, institutions and instruments are described. Special attention is given to the limitations and constraints of Moscow's soft power strategies. The reasons why these strategies are often being inefficient are explained. The Kremlin's inclination to the combination of the soft and hard power strategies is identified.

Keywords: Russia; soft power; Kremlin; foreign policy

Introduction

It has become commonplace to claim that in the post-Cold War era key international players often prefer to exercise soft rather than hard power. According to those who have adopted the soft power concept, economic, socio-cultural, institutional and legal instruments are more efficient in the present-day world than military strength or direct political and economic pressure. In their view, for many nations, hard power has become an exceptional tool and a last resort in foreign relations rather than day-to-day practice. Hard power is now mainly applicable to those international actors who violate international law or directly threaten national, regional or global security.

Since the mid-2000s, Russia has attempted to develop a soft power concept and an implementation mechanism of its own. The idea of soft power was formally introduced into Russian foreign policy doctrine in 2013 and top Russian leaders (including President Vladimir Putin) have declared that soft power instruments are the most important ones in Moscow's foreign policy arsenal. However, Moscow has repeatedly used hard power instruments in the post-Soviet space over the last decade – most recently in the cases of Georgia in 2008 and Ukraine in 2014–2015. Such actions are dissonant with Russia's officially proclaimed adherence to non-violent foreign policy methods.

Russia's soft power strategy is a relatively new theme in the academic literature and remains noticeably under-researched. Several categories addressing this topic can be identified. First, some studies, mainly of an historical character, have focused on the alleged continuity of Russia's present-day soft power strategies with Soviet-type propaganda or even Russia's pre-revolutionary foreign policies (Tsygankov, 2013a and 2013b).

On 12 Sep 2023, a petition calling for the prevention of her appointment was launched:

These petitions may have only little actual effect, but this is definitely something the Italian Senate should consider doing.
